

Ceremony Lineup

Officiant

Can either come down the aisle, or enter in through the side - let's everyone know we're about to begin

Groom

Typically groom will come down the aisle - can be with parents, grandparents, etc.

Grandparents

Grandparents of each couple will walk down together (grooms grandparents, then brides grandparents)

Grooms Parents

Step-parents can also be included in this mix and will sit in the first or second row

Mother of the Bride

The Bride's Mother is typically escorted by a close family member (brother, son, etc.)

Groomsmen & Bridesmaids

There are a few different options for bridesmaids and groomsmen. The most classic processional order would have the bridesmaids and the groomsmen coming down the aisle in pairs. You could also switch it up where the groomsmen will walk down the aisle individually either after the groom or after the parents (the best man is always last). Then, each bridesmaid would walk down the aisle solo, with the maid/matron of honor at the end.

The first groomsman or bridesmaid to walk down the aisle will stand the farthest away from the couple, so the best man and maid of honor will stand directly next to the couple. For the rest of the party, you can either organize them by height or how long they've known the bride/groom

Flower Girl & Ring Bearer

If young attendants will be participating in the ceremony, they are the last to walk down the aisle before the bride. Depending on their ages, they can either stand with the rest of the wedding party or take a seat with their family members.

Bride & Father/Family

The bride and her escort (traditionally her father), is the last person to enter the ceremony space. The bride may also walk down the aisle with both parents, just her mom or another loved one, like a brother, grandparent, son or daughter.
